Their instructions contemplated an investigation in the direction of determining the exact condition of the service in all its parts. In particular to the individual com-petency and adequacy of the present force of inspectors, the efficiency of previous inspections and the sufficiency and condition of the life-saving equipment, fire apparatus and other safety appliances required on passenger-carrying steamers, as well as the construction of this class of steamers. In presenting the report to the President he Secretary says that the evidence before him from all sources, both from the reinspection by the officers of the navy and from reports by officers of his department, ndicates clearly that there has been a great increase in the past year in the effi-ciency of the steamboat inspection serv-ice, due in large part to the work of the commission that investigated the disaster to the Gen. Slocum, and to the reinspection

"Greatly increased activity and care on the part of the steamboat inspectors have been observed, together with increased at-tention on the part of masters and owners of ships to the subject of proper equipment and discipline. "In addition thereto a recent brief tour of inspection by the supervising inspector general has had excellent results, and a further and more extended tour is proposed by him, with a view to maintaining the present improved conditions, its being un-derstood that such policy of personal inspection by the supervising inspector gen-eral will hereafter be adopted as a perma-nade subsequent thereto by the officers of the navy. He adds:

"The rules and regulations of the service, after very careful consideration, have been revised, strengthened and codified, and certain greatly needed legislation has been secured. The force of inspectors at certain ports also has been increased so as to render possible a more complete enforcement of the law in those parts. To Explode Fifty Tons of Dynamite. Henderson's point, on Seavey's Island, the southern end of the Portsmouth, N. H., navy yard, will take place on Saturday, July 22. This date as been selected so as to allow the Marine and New Hampshire congress delegations and many other distinguished people to be present. Miss Edith Foster, daughter of Superintendent Foster, will touch the key which will explode fifty tons of dynamite. The removing of this point of land will widen the river 350 feet at its narrowest point and allow the largest battleships to have ample depth of water to come to the navy yard. The work of re-moving the point has taken up four years. The contract price was $470,000.

WONDERFUL PROGRESS IN THE TERRITORY'S SHORT LIFE.

Excellent School System-Evidences of Culture and Refinement - A Church-Going People.

BY WILLIAM E. CURTIS. Special Correspondence of The Star and the Chicago Record-Herald.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., June 19, 1905. So far as scenery goes, I think Oklahoma has the loveliest landscapes I have ever seen. Its hills are not too high, its prairies are not too flat, its streams are not too large and its forests are not so great as to hide the rest of the country. In June the territory looks like one grand park, and is the greatest triumph of nature in her role of landscape architect. Just now everything is in perfect condition. The foliage is fresh and perfect, and as lustrous as if every leaf had been washed and newly varnished only a day or two ago. The yellow fields of ripened wheat and the rustling corn make the picture perfect. The farmers complain of having had too much rain, although no damage has been done to the crops. It has left the territory as fresh and bright and Record-Breaking Crops. And what crops they are! Nature is going to furnish an unanswerable argument for statehood, and unless some cyclone or other disaster comes the soil will yield such harvests this year as were never known before Nearly all of the territory is under cultivation. The 365 miles from east to west and 210 miles from north to south could swallow up Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Vermont and half of Connecticut, and almost every acre is producing something this year—something that will bring money into the pockets of the people and increase their importance as portion. members of our great commonwealth. In the western part of the state, as you perhaps know, there is an area of high and dry land that needs irrigation in order to make it a sure producer; but this year it will not fall to do its share in rolling up a big col-umn of agricultural statistics. To make the future sure it is proposed to build a reservoir covering 4.275 acres by constructing a dam across a rocky gorge in Otter creek and there store water enough to irrigate 43,000 acres. Another reservoir may be constructed on the north fork of the Red river, which will furnish water enough to irrigate 67,000 acres; and that is all that will be necessary to reinforce the rainfall of nature. The farmers of western Oklahoma are not tak-ing very much interest in the project, however. This scheme is too far from them. They do not need the land for agriculture. and they do need it for grazing Sixteen Years Old. Oklahoma is sweet sixteen. Her birthday was celebrated on the 22d of April last, for on that day in 1889 the gun was fired as a signal for the rush of home-hunters. Those sixteen years have witnessed a miracle of growth and development. They have no parallel in the history of any other state. It must be said, however, that the condihere were favorable to it-more favorable than were found by the pioneers of any other country on earth—and the homes that stand upon these beautiful prairies cost less labor and less hardship than those of any new land that was ever settled. The history of Oklahoma is unique. The population now, according to the best estimates, is between 700,000 and 750,000. and it is increasing at the rate of about 20 per cent a year. Seventy-one per cent of the people are engaged in agriculture, and it is asserted that a larger variety of crops can be produced on this soil than in any other part of the world. Upon many a farm you can find growing, side by side, all of the staples; all of the botanical products than can be found between the two oceans and between the great lakes and the gulf. Kansas has plenty of corn and wheat, but it cannot grow cotton; Oklahoma can produce not only an unlimited quantity of corn and wheat, but an unlimited quantity of cotton also, and of the very best quality of each. Its reputation has reached other parts of the world. On the steamer which brought me from Japan last summer was a representative of the Cotton Manufacturers Association at Osaka, on his way to Okla-homa to make contracts for cotton that is now growing, and he told me that his em-ployers preferred the Oklahoma fibre to all others. Wheat and Potato Crops. Wheat grows just as well as cotton and the crop last year amounted to about 36,-000,000 bushels, ranging from fifteen to thirty bushels per acre. Nearly all of the Oklahoma wheat is consumed at home. Mills are springing up in every part of the territory, with other manufactories, and are scarcely able to meet the local demand. Sixty million bushels of corn were raised last year, varying from thirty-five to sixty bushels an acre, and nearly all of it was used in feeding Oklahoma hogs. Very few oats were shipped, because they were needed at home, and it may be said that, with the exception of cotton, the people of the territory eat their own agricultural products. The cotton fields last year yielded nearly 250,000 bales and this year it is expected to reach 300,000 bales.

The potato crop also is a money-maker, two crops being grown on the same ground each year. The first is harvested the latter part of June and brings funcy prices; while the second is dug late in the fall and is kept chiefly for seeding purposes. Poultry is an important item also, and last year more than $2,500,000 worth of eggs and chickens were shipped outside the territory in addition to those used at home. The diversification of crops is the best kind of insurance, because it is impossible for them all to fail in the same year. There have been no crop failures in Oklahoma since the settlement of the territory, but oc-casionally the farmers find a narrow margin between profit and loss on some grains or vegetables, and it is a lucky thing for them to have others to fall back on as rev-enue producers. Secretary Wilson, who is the great apostle of diversified farming. finds profound satisfaction in the condition of things out here. Not long ago he told me that Oklahoma was an ideal country in that respect. The planters of the southern states would do well to come here and study the methods and learn how wise it is not to put all of one's eggs in a single basket.

Small Farms Well Tilled. Another great advantage in Oklahoma is that the farms are all small. Very few families have more than 160 acres. Another is that nearly every acre is worked by the man who owns it. Unless it be one of the Scandinavian countries, I do not think any section on earth has so large a proportion of home-owners as Oklahoma: and seeing the homes today, as you pass through the territory on a railroad train or drive about, you would never believe that almost every one of them has been developed from the dug-out, the sod hut, or the canvas tent within sixteen years. While there are no splendid man-sions in the territory; while probably no house outside of the city of Oklahoma is worth more than $15,000 or $20,000, the great majority of homes are much more com-fortable than the palace of any king. They cost from $1,500 upward and are filled with many luxuries as well as all the com-forts that are needed. An old-fashioned frontiersman was complaining to me yes-terday of the extravagance of the people terday of the extravagance of the people of this section. He said that when he came west his family slept on a straw tick and were glad to have a chair aplece. A wagon and a plow, an ax and a hoe were all that was considered necessary. But today the Oklahoman must have a sulky plow, a sulky planter, a self-binder, a buggy and a carriage; a steel kitchen range, a bookcase full of books, iron bedsteads with brass trimmings, a mirror as tall as a worker way a sewing mechanic with five drawers. Culture and Education.

There is a good deal more than sarcasm in those remarks. A refined taste has touched the farming community as well as the city people, and you find its influence everywhere you go. No part of the United States has a higher average of culture. There is no house into which a newspaper does not go; and at most of them the rural free delivery carriers leave one or more magazines at the beginning of each month. Of the three-quarters of a million population only 3 per cent are illiterate. Few states in the Union have so high an average of intelligence, and rough have a better age of intelligence, and none has a better school system or so rich an educational endowment. The school fund of Oklahoma is thirty millions of dollars, and the pro-

There are more than 3.000 schools in the territory, and according to the last report there were 2.578 school houses, valued at $1.617.213. Last year $1.206.278 was paid out in salaries for teachers, and nearly every one of the 2.0.000 children in the state was in school. There is a library in almost every town. Mr. Carnegie has been generous toward the larger cities, and in the smaller towns you will find neighborhood libraries in the school houses that are well patronized and appreciated. Oklahoma has twenty-eight dafly news-papers, 285 weeklies, 23 monthlies and 5 semi-monthlies. Each seems to be well supported. The Oklahoma City and Guthceeds are being wisely expended.

rie papers are up to date, with telegraph news from all over the world, and I do not know where you can hear more intelligent comments upon the Russo-Japanese complications than among the farmers of this section. There is a "board of strategy" in every town and village, and the approach of the Baltic fleet toward Vladi-vostok furnished a topic for controversies more exciting than have occurred in this section since the "Sooners" were expelled from "the Land of the Fair God."

A Church-Going People You will be surprised at the church statistics. Some eastern people have a very incorrect idea of "the wild and woolly west," and I do not suppose they will believe me when I say that the ratio of church membership in Oklahoma is higher than it is in the New England states. In 1904, when the population of the territory was probably about 6.0.000, the actual mem bership of the various churches was 105,694, and there were $6,000 scholars in the Sunday schools. If you will make a slight mental calculation you will find that this is a very high proportion; and if you will compare it with the returns from other states the result will be surprising. But these figures are no more surprising than may be found in the statistics of crime.

Okiahoma has no penitentiary. She has to borrow one from Kansas, and during the last year she sent up only 196 convicts, of whom seven were women. I doubt if any of the older states can show a better pro-

On the 1st of January, 1905, Oklahoma had nearly 6,000 miles of railway, the greater part of which had been constructed in four years. The revenues for freight and passengers collected at Oklahoma City alone for 1904 were $2,754,012. The increase of wealth has been quite re-markable. The farm lands returned for taxation in 1900 had an area of 2875,704.

In 1904 this area had increased to 8,661,945 acres. The valuation of the different kinds of property increased with equal rapidity. The figures are as follows: $30,668,770 16,498,551 11,109,667 4,059,729 .$9,875,638 Town property... Railroads

. 8,892,938 4,011,633 1,273,731 Money in credit ... The Father of Oklahoma. It is proposed to erect a monument in honor of David L. Payne, the original 'sooner," whom the people love to call "The Father of Oklahoma." He was one of those uneasy, restless spirits to whom civilization is tedious. He was a natural pioneer, and loved to sleep on the soil. He was born in Indiana in 1836-a farmer's boy -and as soon as he was old enough to leave home wandered westward and roamed over the prairies. He found the Indian reservations south of the Kansag boundary more like Paradise than any land he had ever seen, and went to Washington in the seventies to get some one to introduce a bill to open them to settlement. He remained around the Capitol for several winters, and when his money gave out the Kansas delegation secured him a position as a doorkeeper in the House of Represen-tatives. He remained there during the sessions of Congress and after adjournment each year would go west and stir up the people by organizing expeditions and invad-ing the Indian Territory, so that the government would be compelled to use the mil-"Cap" Payne organized seven of those expeditions, and on each occasion was arrested and taken before the United States But he accompaished his purpose, which was agitation. He filled the news-papers full of Oklahoma and "No Man's Land," as a portion of it was called, until finally public sentiment and the clamor of home hunters compelled Congress to act, and the territory was opened in 1889. But "Ole Cap" Payne, the "King of the Sooners," was condemned to the fate of Moses, He was not allowed to enter the promised land. He died before the proclamation took effect, but his memory will be perpetuated by the people, who now enjoy the blessings he won for them.

DISTURBERS OF SLEEP. Commissioners Besought to Abate Alleged Nuisances. The campaign against hucksters, small children, dogs, cats and other alleged "noise agencies" is on, and the District Commissioners are being pressed to consider the matter carefully, that the sleep of the "night workers" may be long and peaceful.

Among the letters received at the District building was one from Mr. D. W.

Daly, 1527 T street northwest. Mr. Daly is a telegraph operator, who works while the city and the hucksters sleep. Consequently, he has to sleep while the city—and the hucksters—work. Therefore, he prays that the Commissioners will give heed to the protests and maintain the quiet of the community. "The night workers of this city," .. says Mr. Daly, "including newspaper men, printers, telegraph and telephone operators and others whose work is mostly a work of public necessity, have no easy time in getting enough sleep to enable them to do their work properly, and it is not necessary to turn loose on them 650 sleep-destroying hucksters. If a poll were taken of the people in this city who are obliged to get their rest and sleep in the daytime it would be found that they greatly outnumber the Another complainant is "Mr. Anony mous," who lives somewhere in the vicinity of 27th and P streets northwest. "Mr. Anonymous" avers that a small army of white and black children coast down the sidewalk past his house, screaming to the full capacity of their youthful lungs. Then, declares Mr. Anonymous, the chorus is swelled and strengthened by a great variety of black and white curs that yelp and howl and bark and make themselves generally obnoxious. Mr. Anonymous might be prevailed upon to stand all this, he says, but in the rear of his house there is an alley which is infested with cats; not peaceful, purring felines-but the ferocious, walling and extremely noisesome variety. This, says he, is too much. It is the straw which has he insists, is possible under such conditions as he has enumerated.

A personal interview with the Commiswith Mr. Anonymous in this regard. But the Commissioners are not in the habit of extending sympathy or applying remedies, unless convinced that conditions are not what they should be. An investigation was made by Lieut, Shilling of the Georgetown police precinct. He reports that he canvassed the entire vicinity and failed to find Mr. Anonymous or any one else who would admit having written the letter of complaint.

most perceful in Georgetown, and that no resident in the locality affected has any kick to make. All is serene, says Lieut. Shilling, and the bird of peace is perched upon the doorsill, pluming its burnished wings at ease. If Mr. Anonymous will give his right name to the Commissioners he will be so advised.

Furthermore, he declares that the vicinity referred to in the complaint is one of the
